There are 5 playable characters in the game, consisting of Jackie Chan, Ronny Yu, James Bond, Chuck Norris and Chris Tucker. I had first seen the game played at an arcade in Japan back in 1999, when I was about 10 years old. I remember it being a bit more fun than most of the other games at the time. The game didn't get a release in the West for some time after it was made, but it has since popped up on many online stores like Amazon for significantly cheaper than the original price, before it was released in the West in 2001. When I first saw the game back in 1999 I remember being a bit disappointed by the lack of a decent storyline and the same controls as other games from the era, which probably isn't a good sign. I've seen some gameplay videos which show that the game has a fair amount of unique content that hasn't been seen in other games of the time. For the most part, the game seems to have players completing timed jumps and quickly attacking enemies, with the goal of collecting a number of different items. The character selection The five playable characters consist of Jackie Chan, Ronny Yu, James Bond, Chuck Norris and Chris Tucker. I was really surprised that it was possible to play as a black person in the game, as the images of the characters at the start of the game show them in all white outfits. There is also no indication that the player can switch between characters or start the game as different characters. The developers did have the foresight to put the characters in a list of who you could switch to
