They're 5-0 at M&T Bank Stadium this season, including 3-0 in the playoffs, and they had been a lock for the AFC North crown before the weekend. They almost held on to a 30-27 win over the Bengals with a last-minute touchdown pass from Joe Flacco to Jacoby Jones that eliminated Cincinnati from the playoffs. Their win over the Steelers on Sunday extended the Ravens' current winning streak to four games. They can make it five with a win over the Chargers at M&T Bank Stadium on Thursday night. Flacco is having a career season. He is currently on pace for 4,938 passing yards, which would be the most since the 2012 season and would shatter his previous career high of 4,307. He is also on pace for a career high in touchdown passes (24) and has an 84.3 QB rating. He has won six straight regular-season games against the Chargers, including last year's 34-27 victory at M&T Bank Stadium that made him the NFL MVP. Los Angeles is 4-4, but they've been good enough to compete in the NFC West. Philip Rivers has had his best season as a pro, but it hasn't been enough to keep the Chargers in the postseason. They're on a two-game losing streak and their playoff hopes are slim. The Chargers have averaged 19.4 points per game during their losing streak, compared to 23.1 during their eight-game winning streak. They lost to the Ravens 27-23 in Baltimore last season, snapping a streak of three straight postseason appearances.Q: Unable to declare field variable of generic type I have the following interface: public interface IElementReference { T getElement(); } I have two implementations of the interface: public class LeftElementReference implements IElementReference { private LeftElement element; public LeftElementReference() { } @Override
