EU-mania I knew that both were popular in Prague, and I didn't know that they had reached the stages of their rises that they have today, but I am very happy that they have reached their zeniths. I remember going to the Czech Republic in 1999/2000 as an undergraduate and getting into a debate about who I should spend my first year on a tour. It was between "Sûla, Scheveningen, Prague, Prague, Prague, Scheveningen" and I clearly remember arguing for Prague being the best place because "Zizek, for one, is from Prague". This incident still makes me laugh when I think about it. What really came to mind when I heard the news that both Zizek and the European Union had won the Nobel Prize was the same old line of "Zizek, for one, is from Prague", only this time with Zizek winning instead of Scheveningen. Although Zizek never spoke a word of English, Zizek-mania has never reached the scale of EU-mania and that is quite understandable. I know that many would agree that Zizek's works are very difficult to understand and I have a soft spot for his work on Hegel and Freud, but I am also quite happy for my original theory to be proven wrong. For the last two years I have been saying that Zizek is 2d92ce491b
