Concentration-effect relationships for total and unbound carbamazepine (CBZ) and lamotrigine (LTG) were determined in patients with epilepsy. The total and unbound drug concentrations were measured by equilibrium dialysis. The unbound fractions were calculated using a series of equilibrium dialysis data. The total and unbound drug concentrations were analyzed by a three-compartment model (central, peripheral and dialysis) using NONMEM. First-order and saturable elimination was observed for both total and unbound CBZ and LTG. The unbound fraction for CBZ was 0.24 and for LTG 0.72. The steady-state volumes of distribution for CBZ and LTG were 1.51 l/kg and 1.19 l/kg. The drug clearance was similar for CBZ and LTG, 0.24 and 0.25 l/h/kg, respectively. The clearance for CBZ was lower than that for LTG, but the differences between the drug clearance values were not statistically significant. The total and unbound drug concentrations over time and within the dialysis membrane 2d92ce491b
