We reviewed our experience of cerebral venous sinus thrombosis (CVST) to describe current therapeutic practices in France. Data on cerebrovascular diseases from January 1, 2007 to December 31, 2009 were extracted from a national database of neurology and neurosurgery centers. Among 3410 patients with CVST, clinical data and therapeutic management were retrieved and analyzed. The current therapeutic practices were studied by a questionnaire designed by a panel of French neurosurgeons and neurologists. Overall, 17% of patients had CVST, with a male-female ratio of 2.6. The median age was 37 years. Spinal CVST was predominant (88.8%), with a rate of arterial ischemic
