Yep, that's precisely what I was thinking, also that the T-34 is an absolute beast, I have 3 of them myself. It has a beautiful, simple machine that some of the best Russians built and are still building. Some Russians even had to import the metal from European companies since getting precious metals is pretty difficult there. In fact, I think the Soviets back then were the 2nd largest supplier of metals to the US. This one is a real collector's piece, but he's probably selling it for a couple of grand's to pay for a tank or two or its repairs. I bet all those broken driving wheels are a real pain in the butt. Hey man, let me know what ya got from your T-34, that's a real beauty and I know it's no Japanese tank, it's Soviet to the core and designed to be built on Soviet soil, they couldn't care less if they sold them to the japs or Chinese.
