But the stars of the Lions' squad don't always start at the top of the game. Below we take a look at a selection of players who started off as an unknown quantity, and quickly improved to make an impact. Danny Care Care has often been brought up as one of the bright spots of the England squad, starting three games for his country in 2014. He became a regular in the squad in 2015 and started against the All Blacks in the Six Nations, scoring his second try for the Lions. He has been England's top centre since then, scoring five tries, and has not looked back since. But it wasn't an easy transition for him. "I was just trying to impress them," he said of his Six Nations performance. "I wasn't sure what to expect after that but it turned out well and I've been working on it ever since. "It's great to have that selection." Liam Williams Getty Images His debut game for the Lions in June 2013 was seen by many as a non-event, the youngster's Welsh side defeated Wales 27-18, but he went on to start in every game for the rest of the tour. Williams did well enough to force his way into the World Cup squad, but was overlooked for Sam Warburton's position. But he has never 2d92ce491b
