in python? I don't want to save the image as a whole, and just want to print the subset. I'm open to suggestions on other approaches that would work with my images. Thanks. A: If you are familiar with the Python Imaging Library (PIL), use the PIL.Image.copy() function to make a copy of the image and then do whatever you want to the copy. Here is a very simple example. >>> from PIL import Image >>> img = Image.open('test.jpg') >>> img.show() >>> copy = img.copy() >>> img.show() >>> copy.show() You could even use the PIL to help you resize the image and then save the copy to a new file like so: >>> from PIL import Image >>> img = Image.open('test.jpg') >>> img.resize((50, 100)) >>> copy = img.copy() >>> img.show() >>> copy.show() >>> copy.save('copy.jpg') Note: In the above examples, the names of the images don't matter, only the names of the files.
