Robotic Surgery Robotic Surgery Overview Implementation of robotic surgery dates back to 1990 when the first revolutionary robotically-assisted minimally invasive surgical was performed on a Swiss surgeon, Dr. Walter Truett. The development of a computer-linked surgical robot was completed in 1992, and the first U.S. patient was treated in 1993. Today's robotic systems are smaller and more precise than the original system. They also perform better in some procedures, helping to ensure successful outcomes for the patient. These systems provide enhanced precision and motion control capabilities; surgeons can perform precise motions of minute arms, jigs, or tools through smooth, anatomically correct paths with greater force and accuracy than with traditional techniques. With robotic assistance, surgeons can cut at angles without incisions, deliver precise tumor removal, and insert corrective instruments at precise sites. Robotic technology has further enhanced the training of new surgeons, especially in new or less-experienced surgical specialties. It is also a major force in reducing patient risk, improving comfort, and decreasing infection risk. It is particularly useful for certain complex procedures (such as rectal cancer), which are more likely to be successful with robotic assistance.

CONTINUING EDUCATION Continuing education, including mandatory periodic updates and maintenance on all of the robotic systems at St. Louis Children's Hospital, is crucial to ensuring the highest level of safety for patients. Quick Links "I feel confident and comfortable in this high risk, high volume speciality because of my two Board Certified physicians and their supporting staff." — Dr. Rogers U.S. News & World Report ranked St. Louis Children's Hospital first in orthopedics, surgery, urology, and thoracic surgery for the past two years, the first time for a children's hospital in the nation. The Best Children's Hospitals is a project of the National Quality Forum (NQF), an independent, nonprofit association to improve pediatric care. American Heart Association has designated St. Louis Children's Hospital as a Cardiac Center Network, and it is the only children's hospital in the United States named a Level III Trauma Center by the American College of Surgeons.

1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a zoom lens, an optical apparatus using the zoom lens, and an imaging device using the zoom lens. 2. Description of the Related Art In recent years, a high-resolution image sensor has been developed to meet a demand for high-resolution zoom lenses. As a zoom lens for an image sensor, a so-called angle of view of the zoom lens is 110 degrees or more with respect to an angle of view of about 60 degrees with an ordinary zoom lens. Examples of an image sensor and a zoom lens for an image sensor used in a recent camera which is equipped with an image sensor include the ones described in JP-A-9-118064. In the system described in the JP-A-9-118064, an intermediate lens group, a low magnification zoom lens, and a high magnification zoom lens are arranged in that order from an object side. A zoom ratio is set to about 1.5 in the low magnification zoom lens. To achieve an image with a high resolution, it is necessary to increase a pixel pitch in the image sensor. However, in the system described in the JP-A-9-118064, as the pixel pitch is increased, a ratio of an effective diameter to a diameter of an exit pupil is made to be less than 1.5. This fact results in a problem in that a decrease in brightness of the exit pupil is relatively large. On the other hand, it is desirable to increase a zoom ratio in a high magnification zoom lens. However, if a zoom ratio is increased, it is difficult to achieve an angle of view of the zoom lens of 110 degrees or more with respect to an angle of view of about 60 degrees with an ordinary zoom lens. Consequently, it is necessary to dispose an aperture stop close to the object side to increase a light amount at a telephoto side. However, in this case, a decrease in an aperture diameter or a decrease in a diameter of an exit pupil is caused, so that a decrease in brightness of the exit pupil becomes larger. As a zoom lens for a camera, which is capable of realizing a high resolution image with a high zoom ratio, a three-group zoom lens in which an aperture stop is disposed in a third lens group is proposed in JP-A-2011-17533. However, in the three-group zoom lens, it is difficult to achieve a high zoom ratio without increasing a total magnification ratio. The amount
