Another potential pitfall is the use of a single case report to interpret observed patterns of illness, which might have been initiated by a different pathogen. Furthermore, the significance of SPN as a complication of COVID-19 is not yet clear. It is reasonable to consider that it is unlikely to have a strong correlation with mortality rate of COVID-19. But, in terms of research, whether it is predictive of disease progression and mortality is worth studying. In addition, we need to pay attention to the patients who are already hospitalized and who are receiving mechanical ventilation. These patients have more serious conditions than that of COVID-19 pneumonia patients who are not already hospitalized and not receiving mechanical ventilation. Another consideration is the importance of the whole body in the distribution of the viral load, even though no direct evidence can be found at present. With increasing awareness of the virus, more cases with COVID-19 will be found. The potential for delayed presentations with more serious organ damage should be considered. This review offers an attempt to provide a broad view of the clinical spectrum of COVID-19. It is possible that other variants of the virus may lead to more severe clinical outcomes. The pathogenic factors and therapeutic strategies remain to be clarified. Declaration of conflicting interest {#sec0005}

JAKARTA, Indonesia — A tsunami triggered by an earthquake that killed two dozen people and devastated a coastal resort in Indonesia was twice as powerful as the one that struck the country's southwest in December 2004 and killed at least 220, according to a new estimate released Wednesday. The 6.1-magnitude earthquake that struck near the city of Padang on Tuesday night killed two people and damaged hundreds of homes. But no tsunami warning was issued and little damage was reported. The latest tsunami, which struck at 11:56 p.m. on Tuesday, was weaker and occurred farther inland than the one in December 2004, which triggered a tsunami warning for the region and was the largest in Indonesia's history, killing 220 people and leaving some 100,000 homeless. A tsunami warning was issued in December for coasts near the 4bc0debe42
