after a new trial judge released former Enron CEO Ken Lay from prison, the judge has now barred federal agents from searching Lay's property and assets without Lay's permission. In a 32-page order, newly-installed federal magistrate judge Loretta Preska ruled that ex-Enron officials who had cooperated with the government were under no obligation to turn over to agents the contents of an Enron safe-deposit box. Lay had been charged with obstruction of justice for ordering the destruction of the box in December 2001, after he learned the federal government would seek to obtain its contents -- including an En
