Different file formats: Photoshop supports a wide variety of file formats. The most common JPEG is the most common format for casual use. RAW and PSD files are typically more suitable for editing than JPEG or TIFF. Editing system: The most notable feature of Photoshop is the ability to use layers to manipulate different parts of an image. Tools: Photoshop boasts a myriad of tools for creating various types of effects on images. Each tool has a different function and its own special setting in the options bar. Photoshop is widely used by photographers, web designers, graphic artists, and so on. Adobe Illustrator: Illustrator is an illustration program that lets you create a variety of creative images. It comes with many features that enable you to create anything from regular line drawings to fully drawn cartoons. Illustrator is an example of a vector-based software. Unlike raster-based graphics, vector images are extremely easy to create, have no resolution limitations, and retain the same quality when scaled. Features: Illustrator is aimed primarily at creating decorative type and graphic elements. File formats: AI, EPS, PDF, and SVG are the most common file formats. Editing system: Illustrator has a simple layer-based editing system for creating and editing your image. Tools: Photoshop has many tools for creating and editing. Illustrator is much less strict in terms of tool placement as well as tool specific functions. It has similar characteristics to the Adobe Photoshop since its roots come from Illustrator and Illustrator has almost all of the capabilities of Photoshop. Adobe PhotoShop Elements: PhotoShop Elements is the most basic image-editing software from Adobe. Some may feel it is missing the level of control that Photoshop offers but it's a great value considering its price and features. Elements is a commercial photo editing program that comes with a suite of editing tools and gives you access to a subscription to Adobe Photoshop where you can create and edit files in the powerful Photoshop platform. The capabilities of Elements range from the ability to fix problems with exposure and color balance and removing skin blemishes to the ability to edit and retouch portraits. Elements is more basic than Photoshop and features less options than Photoshop. Features: Elements has very basic features. It is suitable for casual users. It

Q: How do I get POST data to Jade template using ExpressJS with MERN Stack? I want to take POST data and use it in my Jade template. For example: App.js router.post('/', (req, res) => { console.log(req.body); }); And my Jade template: post.jade body h1 Your post title h2 Your post content Which will generate something like: Your post title Your post content Which is basically fine. Now I have a form with fields: My form (inside form.jade): form(method=POST, action=/) textarea(placeholder=Hello, world) input(type=submit, value=Post) I understand I need to add something to App.js. But I'm really struggling with this. In the end, I'll have something like this in App.js: router.post('/', (req, res, next) => { App.logFormData(req.body, res); next(); }); And App.js logFormData: function(data, res) { console.log(data); }, Is this a good approach? Can anybody explain how to make this approach work in Express? A: Yes, this is a correct approach. But you don't have to write that application code in Express, you can also do it in Jade, the main point is that you need to do this action in the route, so in your example router.post('/' your action will be in there, and then whatever data you want to read, you just need to get it in the express request with req.body. In a manufacturing process of semiconductor devices and liquid crystal panels, a plasma is used to activate etching gases, deposit a reactant gas on a substrate, and the like. In such plasma processes, a basic method of operating the plasma is to perform alternately in a high-frequency current mode and a microwave current mode. In the microwave current mode, a microwave is allowed to pass through a waveguide to make

Q: Rails: Problem with includes and find_by I am running into a somewhat peculiar problem with the find_by method in rails. I have a model named Rating. There are two possible classes of Rating, either 'good' or 'bad'. The difference between the two is that the good ratings have a numerical attribute while the bad ratings do not. I have the following code in my controller: def some_action ratings = Rating.find_all_by_class(User.current_user.class_of_rating) #other stuff end However, I am getting the following error: NoMethodError (und
