Browsing Optimization Are you tired of waiting for your pages to load? Are you finding yourself browsing very slowly and with fewer sites being loaded in the address bar? The answer to all these questions is simple. You have been over optimized. I have brought over my friends website and did some research and found a couple of things that he has disabled in the past but never bothered to look at before. He has a Wordpress site and it has some issues with caching. It's not big, but the fact that it doesn't load properly means that he was optimizing for some key metrics and not the user experience. The first thing I pointed out to him was, what type of caching are you using on the site? Using CloudFront I pointed out to him that he has disabled 30s server side caching. This means that the majority of his site is now never cached. It made a HUGE difference in loading. I also pointed out that most of his pages were missing the

ConfigFox is a tweak that brings Firefox's capabilities to the wide user base, making all the settings easier to understand and modify, and at the same time making them less intrusive. Firefox is a pretty decent web browser and the new Quantum release is a major update (this is actually the first of two major updates). Since Firefox is now 32-bit only, It is safe to presume that many users have the latest version installed. However, Firefox's default settings can be a bit aggressive and they can sometimes clutter your workflow. You will never run out of tweaks to make to your favorite browser, so why not automate some tasks using a portable app that you can leave at home (or attached to a removable device). Portable App for tweaking Mozilla Firefox with one-click tweaktastic action Skype is free for personal, business and educational use. You can download Skype on a computer, tablet or smartphone and use it across all your devices. With Skype for Business, you can also easily connect to your meetings directly from your phone or tablet. We have provided the link for latest version of Skype for Business Here: One-click Tweakster Gets More Optimized After you have downloaded the latest version of Skype for Business, you will be directed to the latest version of Skype Web. The main screen of the app provides you with options to add your phone number and other personal details. You can then change your personal details by tapping Change Profile. Skip One-Click Sign-In You can find the main screen of Skype for Business in the app 'Settings'. Click Settings and then 'Accounts' to access your account. Inevitably the first screen you will see is 'Sign In'. You can change the account that you want to use by going to the 'Manage Account' page. You can set a different account to be the default one. 'Manage Account' Page My Account is a screen that you can set by clicking Account. When you click Manage Account, you get the option to select a different account to be the default one. Manage Account Option It is also a good practice to change the default browser to be used for every Skype for Business account. Manage Browser Option If you want to use the default

Similar to the 'Edit' and 'Preferences' settings of Internet Explorer and Chrome, the layout of the Firefox settings is handled in the menu bar, and can be customized by installing related extensions. However, since there is much more to Firefox than one can see in the 'Edit' and 'Preferences' tabs, ConfigFox is designed to bring these values out in the open and to allow for manual changes. Once you start using it, you will likely be glad that the app is now guiding you through the various options, and you will also appreciate the text-based user feedback it provides when modifying the settings. There is no shortage of configuration options for Mozilla Firefox, and it would be a waste of time and effort to painstakingly go through all of them. However, finding out which settings are best to be turned on and which settings are worth the space can be a real pain. ConfigFox aims to provide the options that you will find useful or that you can readily access, not wasting your time to explore what is best to be left alone. Since Firefox is a desktop application, this app is specifically designed for portable PCs, and it works without any installation or data-restoring steps. For this reason, ConfigFox is ideal for users who want to experiment with desktop customization without delaying their everyday computing sessions. You can also use the tool to verify the safety of your browser, such as whether you can trust TLS 1.2 or not.
