KeyMacro is an ultra-low-footprint and powerful macro recorder and keyboard mapper. KeyMacro is a feature rich stand-alone application that supports all major application and OS vendors. KeyMacro allows the user to record macros for pressing keys on the keyboard. When the user starts a macro recording, the cursor keys navigate the focused window, and the F-keys (F1-F12) press the associated hotkeys. KeyMacro can map F-keys to every command you can think of, such as text editors, shell commands, shortcuts, etc. KeyMacro also records mouse clicks and keystrokes. When a cursor-based macro is initiated, the mouse pointer is first moved to a window on the desktop, then a mouse click is recorded, and then the mouse pointer is returned to the keyboard. User-definable keyboard shortcuts can be assigned to every recordable event. KeyMacro comes with a built-in simulator that allows you to test any of the hotkeys before using them in the field. KeyMacro supports multi-monitor settings. KeyMacro can automatically launch applications, open files and URLs, launch web pages, and run shell scripts. KeyMacro supports plug-ins that allow the user to add new commands and new shortcut keys. KeyMacro supports full 64-bit on Windows XP. KeyMacro is licensed for personal use. KeyMacro can also automate your hotkeys with its "Remote Control" feature. For example, press F2 to have KeyMacro take a screenshot of the active window. Press F12 to open KeyMacro's built-in "Remote Control" console, which lets you navigate the keyboard (left and right arrow keys) and display a specified URL in the active window (Alt-Enter).
