"I am a very happy man today," said Hussein, of Hebron, a Palestinian who has lived in the West Bank for most of his life, but his village is within the jurisdiction of the Israeli military. "Because today I was arrested, I was detained for two hours at the settlement of Itamar." It was March of last year when Hussein began carrying a handgun, said his attorney, Mr. Radi. "He was convinced that he could not be blamed for a second time," Mr. Radi said. At the village council meeting, Mr. Hussein said he was arrested because his gun, a .38-caliber revolver that one of his three children had given him, was brought outside. His lawyer said it was a typical affair, but one that came with a bad result. "He has not been able to walk for six months," Mr. Radi said. Dancing In the days of the occupation, where a crowd gathers outside a closed shop and stones are thrown at the building, or a car drives off without warning, settlers are frequent targets. Sometimes, they are chased by settlers, sometimes by the army. In the West Bank in 2010, more than 130 people were killed, the majority by Palestinian gunmen, according to the Israeli human rights group B'Tselem. In the first six months of last year, 45 people were killed by Palestinian gunmen, according to B'Tselem, and 72 were injured. In 2010, the year of the last "uprising," 87 people were killed by Palestinians, according to B'Tselem, including 29 children and 24 of those killed in West Bank cities. A B'Tselem report on the increase in Palestinian violence since 2005 shows that the number of armed confrontations, including clashes in Jerusalem, rose more than tenfold over the last decade, and that one in five Palestinians killed by Palestinians between 2005 and 2010 was a victim of a shooting.
