References Category:Software for television Category:Video software a proper close.... A: So let's look at your exception.... [CrossCoreException (0x8011002d)] System.OutOfMemoryException: Cannot allocate memory - one of the arguments is a copy of the null string. at System.ThrowHelper.ThrowOutOfMemoryException() at System.String.Clone() at Neo.Core.Resources.CSV.CSVReader.GetFirstRecordAsList(Int32 expectedRowCount) at Neo.Core.Resources.CSV.CSVReader..ctor(String filename) So the problem is you're trying to read the file using a loop. That's obviously going to exhaust some amount of memory. There's some real down and dirty code available on the net that does this, and it relies on string.Empty to indicate the end of the file. But string.Empty is a static member of the String class, so it'll just create the same instance over and over. Which will likely cause a bit of thrashing as the string is released and re-allocated to the same instance. If you really want to get a stack trace, try this: [System.Out 82138339de
