A must have for small business and home users for back up, CD/DVD disc retrieval. When your computer fails to boot, what do you do? In most cases, you immediately reach for your backup disc, CD, or disc image. But what if your backup disc, CD or disc image is not available? How are you going to get your data back? Even if you have a backup and it is accessible, you may not have access to the media that contains it. This is where SafeDisc for Mac (SafeDisc for PC) comes in. This software is designed to help you retrieve your data in case you lose your backup, CD or disc image. Not only can you access your backup, CD or disc image (depending on how you have set it up), but you can even create your own backups, CD's, or disc images with the technology used by all superlative backup software. SafeDisc for Mac (SafeDisc for PC) will not only preserve your original backup, CD or disc image, but it can also transfer those files to another computer or device. The transfer process will complete in just moments, and will be totally encrypted. Here's how it works: Set up SafeDisc Insert your backup, CD, or disc image into the drive. Next, click on the "SafeDisc for Mac (SafeDisc for PC)" software icon in the Finder window. Click the Setup button and follow the instructions. When you have finished, click the Start button, and start waiting. Run the software Once the software is installed, you will see the program's main window in the Finder window. Click on the Open CD or Disc button. This will start a transfer operation to your backup, CD, or disc image. Once the transfer is finished, you will see the transfer log message in the window. Click the button to expand and read the details. If you have a password for your media, you will also have access to the password. Happy or sad face? You decide! The SafeDisc for Mac (SafeDisc for PC) software can also export the files to your computer by mail. In addition, you can create a backup disc image of your backups or backup discs. There are two methods that you can use. Firstly, you can choose to create a single image which will contain the files and data from the backup disc or media. Secondly, you can use a backup tree that will contain the files and data from the media or discs

I got a set of keys like (nil "a" "b") I'm trying to delete one of them from this set using "delete" or "remove". But no luck! They are treated as a single item instead of a set. I need the above list to be: ("b" "a") Any idea how to do this? A: Use a function like this to convert a list of keys into a set of keys: (defn keyset->set [set-of-keys] (into [] (remove nil (vals set-of-keys)))) Alternatively, you could also do this directly, using a zip-with function: (defn keyset->set [set-of-keys] (mapv #(remove nil %) (vals set-of-keys))) // Copyright (c) 2012 The Chromium Authors.
