Modules: - Audio: plays the targets when you shoot. - Projectile: runs with the length of the cable and chases the target with the speed that you set. - Sensor: allows you to set the proximity and view angles, to configure the sensor calibration and more. - Tools: you can manage your devices and themes to get the best output. - Others: allows you to activate or deactivate the menu options. This is a very simple, yet extremely powerfull tool. You can add unlimited modes and customizations to your arsenal. The program is not developed by me, but by an user that it is available for download at the link above. Comments Only that there is a separate version for Mac and Linux, and because I use Linux I would like to know if there is any similar tool for Linux. Posted on 2006-12-30 00:01:00_____Hello everyone!! I'm new on camfora.... and I'm looking for a PC program that would help me to control the camera and save as many presets as possible, I mean... a program with a LOT of presets, since I have more than 300 presets for the camera. Do you know if there is such a program for PC??In recent years, the demand for digital image capture devices, also known as image capture devices, has increased dramatically. Because the focal plane of these devices are typically close to the image sensor, the amount of light reaching the sensor is reduced. To increase the amount of light reaching the image sensor, the manufacturers of these devices have increased the light output of the image source, typically a light emitting diode (LED) to compensate for the reduced amount of light reaching the sensor. It is believed that an excessive amount of light reaching the sensor can cause damage to the sensor. One way to reduce the amount of light being directed towards the sensor is to limit the output of the image source. In this way, the output of the image source is the same as the output of the image sensor. Although this method does reduce the amount of light reaching the sensor, it limits the efficiency of the device to convert light into an image. As a result, these devices are also larger than they need to be. Because the image capture devices are typically very small, this is undesirable. Another way to reduce the amount of light reaching the sensor is to increase the size of the sensor and utilize a larger image circle. Increasing the size of
