Bleak economic news for those who depend on tourism. It's not so much the content of the articles that is the issue, it's the numbers. According to the Associated Press, hotel rooms in Las Vegas were down 40 percent and tourist deaths were up compared to last year. According to the AP, the decrease in tourist accommodations was the worst since the 1984 economic crash and the rise in tourist deaths is the most since at least 2003. Other travel blogs are reporting a similar trend. Checking out the airlines: I hear US Airways is flying planes 100% full for the month of July. And, it's not just the domestic flights; international flights are so full, they are refusing passengers to fly to certain destinations. There is a veritable tidal wave of bad news coming from all over the world right now and especially from Las Vegas. There is a lot of talk about the three straight years of economic contraction and the lack of a real growth mindset. This recession is worse than the last two recessions because it could actually drag down a real recovery from the recovery we've been experiencing recently. Many economists are now using the phrase "jobless recovery" when referring to the fact that this recession will not be short, it may drag on for years. This could easily be what we've seen in the U.S. after the Great Depression. This is not a great time to be wealthy, there are many who have had a portfolio of stocks, bonds, real estate, and various investment vehicles they have been working on for decades. For those that are wealthy, time is a great friend. It's time to get rid of stocks and get into safe real estate. For those who are not wealthy, it is time to hoard cash to see what happens next. Pristine real estate is a great place to be at this time. There are properties that are still available in beautiful areas that are more affordable than you'll find anywhere else in the U.S. There are some natural disasters that are developing that will affect many other regions of the country, but will be a non-issue to the world of real estate. Also, the wealth of Europe and Asia make this a perfect time for short term overseas real estate investments. for (int i = 0; i of the building did not satisfy the statutory requirements of a fire compartment and, therefore, could not be used as a compartment. [4] The City of Madison had no emergency telephone number other than 911. [5] In its brief, the City has listed ten of the statutory violations allegedly found by the trial court. Those violations are as follows: "Failure to provide a first-aid kit, failure to provide a fire extinguisher or hose, lack of sprinklers or other fire-extinguishing equipment, failure to provide heat sufficient to create a mist on exterior walls and ceilings, failure to provide alarm system with at least two (2) independent bells, failure to provide a security system with a battery backup, failure to provide a fire alarm system that is independent of the power system, failure to provide a working smoke alarm system, failure to provide a fire alarm system that has been approved by the Department of Insurance, and failure to provide a fire alarm system that has been inspected by the Fire Marshal." [6] The City does not argue that the lack of adequate fire escapes, stairways or exits, the lack of adequate fire extinguishers, the lack of a working sprinkler system, or the lack of an emergency telephone number, standing alone, are sufficient to make the building a public building. We conclude, however, that such absence of a particular safety measure is relevant to the determination of whether the building meets the requirements of § 30.01, STATS. [7] Section 111.43, STATS., was repealed effective July 1, 1986, and replaced by § 45.11, STATS. See 1985 Wis. Act 3, §§ 72, 75 (effective April 2, 1986). [8] The parties agree that under § 45.11(1)(a), STATS., a municipality's inability to provide a vehicle to remove customers to a station less than one mile away means that the municipality has not provided reasonable alternatives. [9] The answer to the question of what alternatives are reasonable is a question of fact which must be determined in each case on the basis of the record. See 4 R.E. Meyers, On Municipal Corporations § 26.35, at 34 (3d ed. 1971). One of the adsorption elements most commonly used is a barium-type element, and such an adsorption element is desirably used for purifying exhaust gas from an internal combustion engine for a diesel engine, and for purifying
