"NyanCatProgressBar is a tiny and clean replacement to Windows Explorer progress bar. It looks just like Windows Explorer's progress bar to you or it makes it look like Nyan Cat came out of nowhere and is now ready to destroy your hard drive. It has Nyan Cat, Nyan Cat's friends, and even Nyan Cat's head all made out of cute little progress bar. Download the IconPack to grab and import icons that match Nyan Cat's colors. Because Nyan Cat's favorite song in this icon is "Nyan Cat", it's now included in the stock version of the icon pack. Some people may like its similarity to Windows Explorer, but not everyone enjoys Windows Explorer progress bar that doesn't respond to music, so we made one with Nyan Cat. UPDATE 24th May 2015: A new version of Nyan Cat Progress Bar is now available on GitHub, with many many new features, including: Support for native Windows progress bars. Support for customising the speed of the progress bar. Support for customising the colour of the progress bar. New features: If a file being copied has an extended format of the file extension, eg. if a file is named "hi.jpg", the progress bar will show the bytes as they are copied, eg. "b30,8", and so on, to show which bytes in the file are being copied, and which byte is being copied currently. If a file is being copied to a location that is shared between multiple computers in a network, the progress bar will show the size of the files being copied, including their sizes of all of the folders it is in. Remember that the progress bar should be updated in the parent folder of the folder that you are copying, or it won't be updated until you quit the application. Also remember that if you are copying a file which is smaller than a megabyte, the progress bar will appear to only indicate a small percentage of the file has been copied. You can now set the format for the time shown on the progress bar, as well as the format for the time the bar appears in its normal and hover states. The 'one second' format can be specified as: hh:mm:ss one second The normal state format can be specified as: mm:ss seconds The hover state format can be specified as: hh:mm one second NOTE: The hover state format is the same as the normal state format, but there is no second padding to the time shown, and the time will be larger (ie. two days smaller, as per the default hover state time format). NOTE: A new, much more configurable progress bar has also been created and is available as the onPageCopyProgressBar at the bottom of the list of plugins on the page. Remember that Nyan Cat Progress Bar can be customised or extended by downloading and using its own small config file, which is available for download here. UPDATE 25th May 2015: The Nyan Cat Progress Bar now supports buttons for 'Open file(s)' and 'Cancel', but the buttons don't actually do anything as yet
