Allows you to save files to your Desktop or another location. I've seen many more advanced trees, terrain and foliage trees in other works, however I just couldn't get them to work for me. Also, this one is a "diorama." It requires little setup, it's quick to do, and it fits all the criteria I said before. Building: 1. Take the body of a blue beige stick figure (or any stick figure you have a spare). 2. Build the head out of a dowel for the eyes, a soda can for the nose, and a washer or similar for the mouth. 3. Drill holes for the eyes, nose, and mouth into the body. 4. Cut the feet from a dowel. Make sure they're double the length of the body, or you will not be able to get the figure to walk correctly. 5. Cut a slot into the dowel to lay the top of the legs. (Do not cut all the way through the dowel!) 6. Drill holes for the bottom of the legs. Use longer dowels for the front legs, and shorter ones for the back legs. 7. Attach the legs to the body, with the top of the legs sitting flush with the top of the body. 8. Create another dowel slot for the torso. Drill holes for eyes, nose, and mouth. 9. Cut a hole in the middle of the dowel and drill a hole for your fingers. 10. Attach fingers to the figure. 11. Add the hat. I found this image on Google. Search for "Best free.jpg of a brown hat." 12. Add the shirt. You can find this image online. I couldn't get the fabric to print perfectly, but it's close enough that it could use some work. 13. Add the jacket. I printed this pattern and cut out my own jacket. It's the same as the image, but I made the jacket 2x the size. 14. Add the pants. I created my own patterns for this. To find them, search "pants that print on fabric." 15. Add a backpack. 16. Create a black and white image for the background. I used PicsArt 1d6a3396d

PayPal Monitor hides in your system tray and monitors all of your PayPal transactions. You can monitor a single account or multiple accounts from the same email address or you can be notified by email of each new transaction. When you are notified, the transactions are displayed on the summary view. The summary view displays the last three transactions. This program does not maintain the most recent transaction, but it does provide you the last three transactions and is faster than using the web site to check the summary. It uses the same IPN as the PayPal Standard or PayPal Pro accounts. No fees apply to transactions with this program. Firefighting foam produced by Arkema SA of Croissy-sur-Seine, France, is seen as a dust cloud and smoke rises from a fire-fighting operation in Forest Hill, south of London, Britain March 17, 2018. REUTERS/Henry Nicholls The Environment Agency (EA) said the fine was imposed after Arkema SA, one of the world's leading producers of firefighting foam, discharged the substance in woodland in Great Britain between 2016 and 2017. The only information publicly available was a settlement with the EA in 2018. Arkema said it did not comment on ongoing litigation. Firefighting foam is made up of a combination of chemicals including ammonia, and if left unreacted can explode in the air. The EA said Arkema's actions had caused a "serious incident" and risked harm to the public and environment. "Without the appropriate measures in place to control, store, transport and dispose of the product, the risk of harm to people, animals and the environment is significant," the agency said in a statement. The firefighting foam is used by Britain's fire and rescue services to extinguish or smother fires. The EA said it had called on Arkema to take urgent measures to improve its handling of the product, which can become dangerous if it is exposed to the atmosphere. The foaming agent can release toxic chemicals,
