I'm stuck on a problem that is driving me crazy. I have this kind of string: Some{#chars} I would like to write a function that can take as argument a substring and replace the characters around that substring with a user input. For example: `print replace_words('Some{#chars}', '#', 'blabla');` The function should return: Someblabla A: `string replace_words(string& s, char c, char replace) { string result = s; size_t position = s.find(c); while (position != string::npos) { result = result.replace(position, 1, replace);`
