In world that is becoming steadily more computerized and computer controlled, Microsoft has traditionally been a force to be reckoned with as a software provider. But for many of us who are technology dependent, they are still an annoying, but well-practiced pain in the neck, so to speak. We've all been there, right? You buy a new computer, or a new iPhone, or a new one of something else. And you find that your relationship to it has changed completely. Suddenly, everything in your life works exactly as you like it to, and you can say things like "This machine is the best thing ever". Then you get one or more new phones and suddenly you are a slave to the phone. At least, you think that if you could just get rid of the phone, everything would go back to normal. That is exactly what Microsoft has done with Windows 10. Apparently, they found in their tests that the only thing that actually worked was having the operating system crash the phone. They didn't bother to go any further. But after crashing the phone, they gave it back to the user and called it a day. Windows

10 Dashboard is a very real application. You can see it in the Settings menu under the Windows Accessories folder. It allows you to enable or disable the installation of all applications as you please. It is also really easy to remove. Simply hit the uninstall button and the windows 10 application will be taken off your phone permanently.
