Wake up news was designed to wake up you up with the most important newspapers, politics, and tech news headlines. To do so, it uses your computer's speakers, if present, and optionally uses your computer's display. It has preset alarm clocks for hearing the news very early in the morning. You can customize the schedule in several ways to fit your own preferences. If you don't have any newspapers you can set the software to access online news for free and read. Wake up news is fully customizable in that you can choose how many alarm songs or links you'd like to hear. Additionally the amount of days a newspaper is displayed before going to a new day can be set. Wake up news is totally adjustable if you don't like a preset alarm clock sound. If you can't wake up fast enough in the morning, wake up news will automatically switch your computer on so you can use it for whatever you normally use it for. The software can also wake you up to a list of different music and/or links to the news. The following format is allowed and even supported by the software: = Your name & = & ! =! " = " = Your Toast } = } I & My & the = I & My & the Animated GIFs = Animerated GIFs Motion JPEG = Motion JPEG and = And It supports many other forms of text as well. If the above format is used then only the first 6, 11, or 13 letters of the name will be displayed. Also wake up news is compatible with normal alarm clocks, snooze clocks, and sleep timer programs. Wake up news will wake you up with news that is important to you. Wake up news will wake you up with news that is important to you. If you want to wake up to a list of

One of the major themes used in the game is one of the reasons why Wake up news was created to begin with. The game developer, Eric Bernatchez, wanted to have a program that reminded him of waking up on the 4th of July. The alarm clock had to come alive with 3 sirens and 5 rockets, and wake him up to the sound
