* Download the latest version of Photoshop at `www.adobe.com` (if you haven't already) and follow the installation instructions in the package to install the program. * Open Photoshop and create a new image file, `Picture1.jpg`, with default settings. * Choose Edit > Paste from the menu to paste the `Picture1.jpg` from your hard drive into the new image. * Choose File > Open. Open the file from your hard drive in Photoshop and rename the file `Picture1.png`. * Click the Undo button (refer to Figure 10-1) to undo the last Photoshop action or command. In Photoshop, selecting Edit > Undo opens the last command you entered in the Undo History. You can also press Ctrl+Z to undo a command. * With the red rectangle layer selected (refer to Figure 10-1), select Edit > Auto-Blend Layers. * The new red layer should be visible in the Layers palette and at the bottom of the Photoshop window (refer to Figure 10-1). * Click the paint brush (refer to Figure 10-1) on the top bar and select the color red (solid fill) or paint with red by choosing the Color panel at the top of the color window and selecting the color red. * The layer should now look like Figure 10-2. To manipulate the paint texture, select the Gaussian Blur tool on the image and drag out the Blur tool, about halfway across the image, in the Directional Gallery at the top of the Layer panel. * If you want to work on a layer, open the Layers panel and select the new layer by clicking on the name of the layer (Figure 10-3). The default layer has no effects applied to it, so adding effects is a good idea. Figure 10-1: Use the Undo History (left) to quickly undo your editing. Use the Paintbrush tool to change the color of the layer (right). * Choose Layers > New from the menu. Create a new layer, and name it `Picture2`. * Click the paintbrush tool to the left of the image, and paint two circles on the layer you just created. * Select the Blur tool and drag out the Gaussian Blur slider, as shown in Figure 10-4. Using the Blur tool, use

Q: Is there a way for a field in a taxonomy term to be unique? I am trying to create a field in a taxonomy term to be unique. I have created a custom field of type boolean and am using the code below to create the custom field: `//field_create_field($terms, $field_name, $of_type, $content_type, $settings, $instance) // Create a custom field for a taxonomy vocabulary $vocab = 'menu'; $field_name = 'field_menu_item'; $of_type = 'field_collection_item_boolean'; $content_type = 'menu_item'; $instance = 1; $field = field_create_field('taxonomy_term', $field_name, $of_type, $content_type, $settings, $instance); $field_label = 'Business Unit'; $field_description = ''; $field_required = TRUE; $field_uid = 'field_menu_item_'. $field_name; $field_name = $field_uid; $field_type = 'boolean_single'; $field_settings_default = array( 'choices' => array( '0' => t('Yes'), '1' => t('No') ), ); $field_settings = field_generate_settings($field_name, $field_settings_default); $field['default_value'] = FALSE; $field['widget']['type'] = 'checkbox';` How can I set it so that only one value in a field can be selected at any given time? A: To achieve this, you need to modify `field_create_field()` code. Currently, the logic is limited to boolean for the field. So, you need to check all the custom fields for the given vocabulary, and change its 'choices' to the values that must be selected for a given item. Note: this is not a fully automated process. You need to modify/re-code the `field_create_field()` and `field_update_field()` functions in your custom module. the Court concludes that a substantial likelihood of confusion exists. A comparison of the two companies
