Field of the Invention This invention relates to an improvement in a gearing mechanism particularly adapted for use as a speed changing mechanism for a vehicle and adapted to be connected to a manual transmission which is used in combination with an automatic transmission. 2. Description of the Prior Art A conventional gearing mechanism of the type referred to above is disclosed in, for example, U.S. Pat. No. 3,702,300 issued on Nov. 7, 1972. It is well-known that for use as a gearing mechanism for a vehicle to be connected to an automatic transmission, it is necessary to reduce the transmission ratio in association with an increase in the vehicle speed or a reduction in the vehicle engine speed. More specifically, if the transmission ratio is the same for a vehicle running at a high vehicle speed as for one running at a low vehicle speed, the transmission efficiency will be very low for the vehicle running at a high vehicle speed due to the significant increase in the transmission ratio, while a large load will be imposed on the drive unit such as an engine for the vehicle running at a low vehicle speed. Accordingly, it will be necessary that the torque capacity of the transmission should be increased for the vehicle running at a high vehicle speed. Where the transmission ratio is determined in a manner as above described, when the transmission is used in combination with an automatic transmission, the speed changing operation is effected automatically when the gear ratio of the automatic transmission is lowered to decrease the transmission ratio
