What's New In?

I'm a Bay Area native and got my start in computers working on computers. This is my chance to get back in touch with the hobbies I have enjoyed outside of computers during the off hours. I work for a government agency and enjoy outdoor sports, especially golf and tennis. Right now I'm pretty inactive but my dream is to pass the knowledge I've gained on the computer to the next generation. Saturday, March 25, 2007 The Break in My Sabbatical A friend of mine, Eric Clifford, a software engineer at Intel, has decided to take his education in the arts to the next level. This weekend he will be taking an informal class on The Art of Modeling 3D and Animation at San Jose State University. He asked if there were any topics I'd like him to cover. I was able to think of some pretty good ones. You can read about them here in my blog.0] = -(der[0].height * der[0].width) / (2*der[0].height) der[0].width /= 2 input.width = der[0].width input.height = der[0].height input.top = der[0].top input.left = der[0].left input.right = der[0].right input.bottom = der[0].bottom return input } var svg = d3.select(this).append("svg") var v = d3.layout.v2() .size([width, height]) .separate([true]) var g = svg.append("g") .attr("transform", "translate(" + width / 2 + ", " + height / 2 + ")"); var w = 450 var h = 400 var path = g.append("path") .attr("d", pathOpacity(v, path, function(d) { return d[0] })) .style("opacity", function() { return pathOpacity(v, path, pathOpacity); }) var node = { width: 8,
