productsQ: How to prove that $\lim {x \to \infty} \frac{x}{x+1} = 1$? How to prove that
\star \left( x \right) \  \
1$? A: Hint:
frac{x}{x+1} = \frac{1}{1+\frac{1}{x}} Setting x=-1 is not relevant. Instead of that, multiply both numerator and denominator by $x$.
A: \frac{x}{\sin \{x \in \{x\} \{x+1\}}
= \frac{x \to \int x}{\lim_{x \to 0}} x}{\lim_{x \to 0}}
\inf y x + \lim \{x \setminus \inf y \} 1\} =
\frac{+\inf\{+\inf\{\}\}}{+\inf\{\}} = \inf\{\}
\star \left( x \right)
\infty $ is because numerator has a greater limit than denominator. Purification of a protein having an antigenic sequence present in a variety of bacteria has been made by many methods using immunologic affinity binding of antibodies or immunoaffinity chromatographic resins. These methods have heretofore required either affinity purification on specific antibodies or the affinity purification of bacterial proteins on an immobilized column of antibodies. The problem with these procedures is that the target material is available only in very small quantities. This problem is alleviated, to some extent, by using a variety of fusion proteins (fusions between bacterial proteins and nonbacterial proteins). The use of these fusions requires relatively high concentrations of the fusion protein due to the low percentage of the fusion protein with respect to total bacterial proteins. U.S. Pat. No. 4,751,183 describes the production of a fusion protein by expressing the chimeric protein in E. coli. This chimeric protein has a fusion moiety of a polypeptide and a target moiety which is identified as a target for an antibody. The patent describes production of the chimeric protein by culturing a bacterial host cell in a culture medium containing a hope this helps, reply back if you have any questions. Review: 'Ketchup' It's not enough that director Marc Levin uses his movie to say "Look at me, I'm so creepy," as he does in "Reasons to Be Happy," which is also about a guy experiencing internal conflict. He has to make us laugh while he's doing it, and "Ketchup" -- which begins as a smart, slightly off-putting comedy -- turns into a regular old high school nightmare that's like "The Beastmaster." Though most of the familiar flicks from the horror subgenre can be seen in the foreground of "Ketchup," like the "Texas Chainsaw Massacre" ("Kill Bill" gang), the "Nightmare on Elm Street" series and "Scream," Levin's movies are slightly different in that they can't be seen as sequels, but are more like variations on the same theme. "Ketchup" is no different. A high school senior (Emory Cohen) finally gets around to telling his crush that she's more into him than he is into her. His two buddies (Jamie Kennedy and Jason Biggs) must discover why. Cohen gives an enjoyable performance as the guy who's trying to get over his "pothead" girlfriend (Melissa Joan Hart), yet it's difficult to discern whether he's really that good an actor. Ms. Hart is tough to watch, which isn't really helpful since her character is very misguided and vacant. If the movie wasn't so heavy on gore and sex, Levin would probably be a lot more impressive. It's funny stuff, and it's good to see the random male fantasy some slackers like to have spring to life. But it has that strange, slowly collapsing feeling that comes with stupidity.Q: Sorting an ArrayList efficiently I have an ArrayList and I am trying to sort it as efficiently as possible. Sorting by a string is already quite slow because I am dealing with thousands of objects. I have code that currently sorts it by the object id and does the following: Collections.sort( list, new Comparator>() { public int compare(List o1, List o2) { int v1 = o1.getId();
