You can learn more about Photoshop at www.Adobe.com/photoshop\_ (opens in a new browser window). The following steps show you how to create a basic photo animation in Photoshop CS3: 1. Launch Photoshop CS3. 2. Open the file ` _activeLayers.psd_` from the book's Companion CD in the folder you set up to import the images for this book. 3. Place the cursor over the layer named ` Layer 0` and select Edit⇒Define Layer. 4. Click the button in the New Layer dialog box that says 0. Select the Type category. 5. Choose Normal in the drop-down list. 6. Click OK. You can perform this type of task on any layer but it's often easier to work on the layer you want to animate. 7. Use the Rectangular Marquee tool to select the area of the image that you want to animate (you can use the Zoom tool to create a zoomed view). 8. In the Layers palette, drag this new, empty layer to the top of the Layer 0 layer. Name this layer `Frame 1` in the Layer 0 layer. 9. Place the cursor over the frame, click the Layer menu, and select Duplicate. 10. In the Layers palette, drag the duplicate layer, which is highlighted in red in Figure 18-3, to the top of the layer stack. Name this layer `Frame 2`. 11. Choose Edit⇒Image Size. 12. Change the Width to 560 and Height to 381. 13. Click OK. The Frame 1 layer fills the current image viewport, just as we want the frame for the animation. In the Layers palette, the two frames are layer. The frame 1 layer is the top layer, and the frame 2 layer is beneath the frame 1 layer. You can further modify the frames as you need. 14. Now the next step is to position the second frame. Place the cursor over the frame, and click the Create Frames button in the Tool Options bar. A small frame box with the Frame 1 layer name appears at the top of the viewport, as shown in Figure 18-4, and both frames are loaded. 15. Drag the Frame 2 layer from the Layers palette to the right side of the

The 2035 Plan: New Sydney Airport Officially Announced Posted on March 2, 2014 The city of Sydney's very own airport is undergoing a major facelift as construction and planning work is currently underway. The airport has been under development since the 1970s as a multi-purpose commercial and freight terminal. It is situated on 11,000 acres at Badgerys Creek and is comprised of an international and domestic terminal. New Sydney Airport Proposal The project is one of the biggest in Australia, with a budget of around 1.6 billion AUD ($1.2 billion). The renovations will maintain the authenticity of the vintage airport, ensuring that the airport will remain at the forefront of Australia's aviation industry. The new airport is expected to open in stages, starting with a new domestic terminal in 2017. New daily flights between Sydney and major cities such as Melbourne, Brisbane, Newcastle and Hobart are planned to begin in 2015, with the new international terminal scheduled to open in late 2018. According to a report published by The Australian, the cost of developing the new airport will include a loan from the federal government, as well as funding from the state and local governments. New Sydney Airport Business Improvement District The new $1.6 billion airport will be developed by a joint venture called Sydney Airport Pty Limited, which is jointly owned by Infrastructure NSW and Keppel Land Pty Limited. The plan includes the renovation of various buildings and properties within the airport precinct, including the Arcola and Kingsford Smith international terminals, the 14 towers, as well as roads and car park spaces. The term of the BID, which will cover the operation, maintenance, and development of the airport, is scheduled to be for 50 years. Road Resurfacing and Docking In addition to a $1.6 billion redevelopment, the airport will also undergo a number of landscaping and infrastructure upgrades. These upgrades include resurfacing of airport roads, docking of aircraft, additional car parking areas, and repairs to the Wellington and Spencer bridges, as well as revitalization of the Macquarie Street and George Street commercial areas. An integrated security screening facility and baggage claim area will also be constructed, as well as a CBD-based helipad. The entire project is set to take 14 years to complete. Q: How to avoid getting "TypeError: element is null" using jQuery.each() I want to rewrite the contents of an unordered list using jQuery's each() function. At this point I have the following code: `for(var i=0; i < testCases.length; i++) {` which works perfectly if I'm passing the object reference `(testCases[i])` as a parameter to the `append()` function, but not if I pass it as part of the `$.each()` loop. How would I go about using the jQuery `each` function to re-write the contents of my list? Thanks. A: You can use the `context` option to get the correct element in the loop. `$.each(testCases, function(i, testCase) { $('#testList').append(testCase); });` Ask HN: How to go about getting equity from a startup that I built? - mawala I've built a few things that are earning me some significant income from the comfort of my own home, but it seems like working with many of the startups in this community that get funded often seems more like consulting than working for equity. I've built an app that's helping businesses run more smoothly - very similar to agile project managers and teams trying to stay on top of the commitment, so we'd both use it daily. We've released a free trial and received some traction, but we're mostly relying on the revenue from advertising revenue, which takes time to build up. Lately, when I ask about the equity one of two things happens - either the company doesn't even ask about it, or it asks for a % in exchange for me focusing on getting customers. I'd say that in general that I make $1,000 in ~3 hours and spend a bit more
