Saket Sreeram & Murthy Srikrishna are singing .Q: How to remove glue from the carpet and old wallpaper? my house has 3 rooms, the stairs between them are very steep, so I had to remove part of the carpet and install some wood on the stairs. What I want to do is to remove the old wallpaper and then glue a new piece of carpet on top of it. I have figured out how to remove the old paper, but I want to keep the glue that was used on the wood. The glue is actually a combination of Elmer's white glue and corn starch, made by a friend. I can't find it anymore (must have been discontinued or something), but I was thinking of using an adhesive that will take glue and just use the layer of glue from the old paper as an adhesive. I have searched for ways to remove glue, but as far as I can tell, they all suggest using something to dissolve the glue, which we don't have. One suggestion was to use baking soda or salt and warm water. However, I don't want to overdo it, I just want to remove the old glue. Is there any other way? A: I think you have either wood glue or a fast acting moisture release adhesive like Elmer's. Try adding a small amount of baby powder and letting it dry and then grinding away the wood and sticking with another piece of paper. This site has an example of what to do.

later in December that he was a candidate to be traded. I asked a favour of Oilers fan Ryan Dickson a few months back, and he was kind enough to do some research on Jokinen. Dickson dug up quite a lot of resources on the winger, including some statistics that I think are pretty interesting, considering we were obviously not going to trade him. Jokinen is, at least statistically, a very solid second-line winger. He is decent at scoring goals and he is highly effective at suppressing the shots against him. As a regular linemate with Taylor Hall, Jokinen played well, and in fact was one of the best two-way players on the team. And while his points per game were pretty average, the team was very effective at keeping Jokinen around the net when needed, meaning he was pretty important to the team's success. As an interesting aside, we know that Taylor Hall was the one that preferred Jokinen's right-wing spot on the line, since it is the one that tended to get the most scoring chances for the team. When he played the wing alongside Ryan Nugent-Hopkins, the pair was less effective, but still posted impressive possession numbers. By no means are we saying that Hall is a bad player, but there are, without question, better linemates for him. For years
