organic light emitting display has advantages of wide angle of view, self-luminescence, short response time, high contrast, etc., and has attracted the attention of a large number of display manufacturers. Organic light emitting display is different from a traditional light emitting display of an illuminating portion, the brightness is mainly provided by the light emitted by an organic light emitting diode, and the brightness and color is mainly determined by the organic light emitting diode; therefore, the organic light emitting diode can be used to replace the illuminating portion, and has a broad application prospect. Currently, in order to reduce the cost of organic light emitting display, manufacture of the driving system and the peripheral circuit of an organic light emitting display has been concentrated, and the number of the driving chips in one panel is increased. However, the size of the driving chip is also increased, and the number of wires also increases. In such a case, in order to reduce a load in the connection process of the wires, the chip on board (COB) technique is usually used, but due to the increase of the number of wires, the connection process has to increase. This case is a problem in that the cost of the organic light emitting display is increased.
