AmreliOne of the first things you do when you're hanging out in a giant city is dine and drink. Dallas has a long history of being a city that attracts people from all over the world, and the first thing they do when they arrive is eat and drink. In downtown Dallas there's over 90 restaurants, many of them specializing in barbecue. Take a few of those menus and dip it in BBQ sauce, and you'll have yourself a meal. I'll start with two of my favorites. Fazenda da Gloria is a tiny place in Bishop Arts just south of downtown. Their rice & beans are outstanding and the barbecued pig tails are served alongside in a basket that they fill with tortillas. The best part of the meal is that there's no place to sit - the owner turned half of the place into an outdoor bar. Guests can go to the bar to munch on their feet or take it a step further and sit at tables that have a bar. My wife and I walk to the bar every time we're there. Prairie Dog Cafe is a BBQ buffet in the Greenline. There are 3 buffet stations: salad, BBQ, and seafood. I'm a sucker for a buffet. It's a safe bet that you'll go to the seafood table because it's near the seafood station. The seafood station has the best ceviche around, but it's no match for the BBQ. You won't have any trouble picking up a piece of pork and beef or one of those smoked sausages. There's usually two stations at Prairie Dog Cafe, and when they add a BBQ station, they do it like Fazenda da Gloria - they turn half of the place into an outdoor patio. Conviction Kitchen and Bar just finished a complete renovation

A comparative study]. To compare laser in situ keratomileusis (LASIK) and photorefractive keratectomy (PRK) in terms of visual results, predictability and safety, and to establish the stability of the refractive results. To evaluate the predictability, three groups of patients were selected: group I--constitution of a control group--without any previous refractive surgery and needing monocular surgery; group II--patients with bilateral refractive surgery, with a minimum interval of 5 months from the last refractive surgery; group III--patients with unilateral refractive surgery. The study included a total of 331 patients (545 eyes), with a median follow-up of 24 months. The following variables were analyzed: visual acuity (Snellen chart), refractive surgery of the fellow eye, refractive results, postoperative topography and clinical safety. The main findings showed an improvement in uncorrected visual acuity (UCVA) in both groups of patients after the first postoperative month, remaining stable until the end of the follow-up. Statistical analysis showed no differences between the two techniques ( $P > 0.05$ ). In group II

a trend toward greater myopia was found in the LASIK group ( $P = 0.051$ ). Spherical equivalent spherical value (SE) stability was superior in group III ( $P = 0.024$ ) and in group I ( $P = 0.001$ ). LASIK and PRK were equally effective and safe. There was a trend toward greater myopia in patients who had undergone LASIK. SE stability was superior in patients who had undergone LASIK in the immediate postoperative period. Zero();
