* Use the Lens Blur feature. You can create a 3-D blur effect with the Lens Blur filter. To use the Lens Blur filter, follow these steps: 1. Choose Filter > Blur > Lens Blur. The Lens Blur dialog box appears (Figure 9-11, top). Figure 9-11. The Lens Blur dialog box (top) is here to help you choose the best setting for the type of camera and image you're working with. If you don't know which setting to choose, the camera and subject properties of your image may be displayed automatically. In this example, the white sky is much sharper than the dark ground. A setting that could work well might be Lens Blur Amount: 0.4. (The Step Size value is already set to 0.4 in this image.) (bottom) The Lens Blur settings are displayed in the Lens Blur dialog box. 2. Select a camera type from the drop-down menu and enter the focal length and aperture in the other two boxes (Figure 9-11, top). For the camera type, choose from one of the following types: * Digital cameras. Select the Camera or Video button to tell Photoshop that you're working with a digital camera's image. You'll find this selection under the Capture Settings heading. * Digital SLR cameras. Choose the DSLR button to tell Photoshop that you're working with a digital SLR (single lens reflex) image. * UFL lens-based cameras. Choose the Lens button to tell Photoshop you're working with a UFL lens-based camera's image. In this case, an UFL lens is attached to the end of the camera. You'll find this setting under the Focal Length and Aperture (UFL) heading. * Lens-based cameras. Select the Lens button to tell Photoshop you're working with a lens-based camera's image. It's not necessary to enter a focal length and aperture if you're working with a lens-based camera. Selecting the Lens button tells Photoshop that you are working with an image taken with a lens. 3. If the Image Settings button is visible, click it to view and change the settings for this image. If not, close the
