MORRIS, Warden, Respondent-Appellee. No. 86-5172. United States Court of Appeals, Sixth Circuit. Jan. 21, 1987. Before KEITH, MERRITT and NELSON, Circuit Judges. ORDER 1 This case has been referred to a panel of the Court pursuant to Rule 9(a), Rules of the Sixth Circuit. Upon examination of the certified record and briefs filed by the parties, this panel agrees unanimously that oral argument is not needed. Rule 34(a), Federal Rules of Appellate Procedure. 2 Petitioner Brennan filed a pro se petition for a writ of habeas corpus pursuant to 28 U.S.C. Sec. 2254. He was convicted of reckless murder and assault with intent to murder. His convictions were affirmed on direct appeal. State v. Brennan, No. 51138 (Ohio Ct.App. July 12, 1980) (not designated for publication). He also unsuccessfully sought post-conviction relief. 3 In the instant petition, the sole argument is that the state court's interpretation of Ohio's exculpatory evidence statute violates constitutional due process. On July 15, 1985, the district court dismissed the petition sua sponte for lack of jurisdiction. On appeal, petitioner states that he is in custody pursuant to a writ of habeas corpus issued by the United States District Court for the Eastern District of New York. This is apparently because the District Court found that his petition was timely filed. 4 The record reflects that petitioner is also serving a sentence in New York on another habeas petition filed in a different court. His current petition is duplicative of the New York petition and thus warrants summary dismissal. Brandon v. District Court of the United States, 444 U.S. 1 (1979). 5 We also note

03-04-2018, 08:40 PM Data Communication And Networking Textbook By Forouzan A.2nd EditionMetrolinx, the provincial transit agency, has released a new poll showing that Ontarians like nothing more than to share stories. The poll, conducted by Angus Reid Institute, found that more than half of 1,004 Ontarians surveyed say that the best part of their commute was "listening to other people's stories" — and 69 per cent said that they are part of a cycling community. It also found that 1,100 people who take transit to work prefer riding it over carpooling, while 3,000 people said they would love a bike-sharing system. But the survey also found that the city's transit agencies are struggling to meet the needs of Toronto's growing population. Of those surveyed, 45 per cent said that "service at local bus stops" was the most important factor in choosing transit, while 40 per cent said they would choose transit if it were the cheapest option. When asked what percentage of Toronto residents will be satisfied with access to transit by 2024, the poll found that 35 per cent of Torontonians think there will be the required service by then. However, 36 per cent said they're not sure, and a further 29 per cent are looking elsewhere. Among transit agencies, the TTC has the most optimistic view. A third of TTC riders said they expect the network to be ready by 2024, compared to 22 per cent of TTC riders surveyed who said they expect to have no choice but to drive — up one per cent since June 2017. The Toronto region's other transit agencies polled in the survey were also found to have more favourable outlooks than the TTC. The Toronto Region Board of Trade, for instance, expects 22 per cent of riders to be satisfied by 2024, compared to
